Who Questions Reading

Needed Materials

A children's book which contains a few different characters

How To Play

Sit down and read with your child. It is important to pick a story that your child already knows well. This way he/she doesn't have to learn the name of the characters and learn how to answer "who" questions at the same time.

When you get to a page with a character say "who is this?" or "who is riding the bike?" Of course, the questions will vary depending on the story. Wait for a response. If your child says the correct answer, praise him/her and keep reading.

If your child doesn't know how to answer or says the wrong answer, point to the picture and repeat the question. If he/she still doesn't know how to answer it, say the answer and ask him/her to repeat it.
